

Biography: Daniel C. Coleman

Professional Memoir

The background of young industry professional Daniel Coleman.

Daniel Coleman is an up and coming professional within the realm of sport and recreation management. He started his academic career at Temple in the spring of 2008 as a transfer student from Bucks County Community College. Originally an aspiring accounting major, Daniel would soon realize it was not what he wanted to do and that his true passion lied within sport and recreation management.

When asked about his decision to change majors Daniel says, “it made perfect sense, it allowed me to combine my keen interest in business with my passion for sports and recreation.”

During his time at Temple, Daniel has developed a scope of key strengths including critical thinking ability, a passion for learning, enthusiasm, and commitment. Through his vast array of industry exposure and field experience, Daniel has also come to realize his dreams of being a professional within the area collegiate athletics. He aspires of one day becoming a college athletic director. This dream came about in the completion of his junior internship with Princeton University Campus Recreation. When asked of this experience, Daniel notes, “the experience was unlike any I ever had. I learned, first hand, what it was like to be a professional within collegiate athletics.”

Outside his academic career at Temple, Daniel is a mathematics tutor specializing in statistics and mathematical concepts. His passion of learning combined with enthusiasm of the industry makes way for a promising young professional.

Industry Experience

Some of the sites where I gathered industry experience include:

- Villanova Special Olympics
- Moshulu Restaurant
- 2009 Philadelphia Marathon
- 2009 Army VS. Navy game,
- Bucks County’s Silver Lake Nature Center
- African American Museum.

I completed my junior internship with Princeton University’s Campus Recreation Department. This was an experience unlike any I ever had in that I learned, first hand, what it was like to be a professional within collegiate athletics while also working at the world renown, prestigious institution that is Princeton University.

Daniel Coleman.

WHAT DOES THE FUTURE HOLD?

The future of this young professional is bright and promising. Having recently been offered an internship position with Princeton University’s Varsity Club, Daniel is weighing his options with careful consideration of the future.

After the successful completion of his senior internship and project, Daniel plans to graduate in September of 2010, with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Sport and Recreation Management.

After receiving his degree from Temple University, Daniel hopes to further his education and knowledge of the industry by attending graduate school.
