

Andrew M. Arnold

Strengths

Inside this issue:

Strengths	1
Family Values	1

My time at Temple University has been nothing but a positive experience. I started attending Temple in 2007 and have been working extremely hard to fulfill my bachelor degree in Sport and Recreation Management in the School of Tourism and Hospitality Management. I have been taught lessons followed by tests. I have learned a tremendous amount of information in the world of sport and recreation but I feel I am ready to take the test in the real world and learn my lessons afterwards. I am a very outdoors kind of person and enjoy nature more than anything. Upon graduation, I am keeping my options open and am willing to step outside of my comfort zone. I have been doing endless amounts of research in the recreation field. I have specifically been looking into internships in Colorado. I vacationed in Colorado when I was young and since then, I have been anxious to go back. The beauty of the outdoors and breath taking mountains surrounding the atmosphere you work in is very appealing to me. I am not afraid to travel but I am nervous to be alone which is something I have never done before. If starting off alone can secure me a professional career in either a recreation or parks department, then I am willing to do that. I know with determination and support from family and friends, I will be a successful business man.

My English Bulldog "ACE"

Family Values

Coming from a big family has taught me a lot. In addition to my mother and father, I have three older brothers. Being the youngest in my family has never been easy, but it has taught me a great deal. I have been raised to believe in myself and always strive to do my best. I not only have made myself extremely proud attending Temple University and achieving good grades, but I have made my family very proud as well. I decided to conclude my newsletter with family values because if it were not for them, I do not know what I would do. My parents have instilled in myself hard work, determination, respect, cooperation, good attitude, order, goodwill, and stability. With all of these values, I believe I will be a great addition to the professional world of sports and recreation.

