

Me, Myself, and I

Hello Montague and Associates inc.

My name is Annis Major. I am twenty seven years old African American Women. Who I am speaks so much more deeply than what I look like or what demographic I fall in. I am an autonomous individual that is full of unique thoughts, beliefs, behaviors, and so much more. I am, intelligent, witty, enthusiastic, flexible, caring, hardworking, persistent, and determined. I am influenced by the people around me, and by the tasks that I partake in. I am a resident of my community, a part of my family, a member of my church, and a component of everything I partake in. I am a friend, a companion, a coach, a leader, a role model, and so much more. All of what I am goes into everything that I do.

My Nine to Five

I am currently employed at the Marriott hotel as a front desk clerk. My tasks at this job are deeply rooted in hospitality. In fact, it's fair to state that my most important tasks are to represent, maintain, and promote hospitality at all times. Specifically, my job entails working with the front office team on tasks such as welcoming and serving guests, maintaining inventory, and compiling and checking daily record sheets, guest accounts, receipts, and vouchers using computerized systems. Communicating effectively is extremely important to my profession. I care about the organization I work for, my job position, and my customers. I am intrinsically motivated to be the best I can and this reflects very strongly in my work ethic.

Ms. Major's Major

I am a current student at Temple University, majoring in Tourism & Hospitality Management. This field of study has made me well versed in several areas of the hospitality industry. I understand the practices and theories behind good hospitality, the fundamentals of effective leadership, the financial and legal issues concerning tourism and hospitality, the research methodology involved, and so much more. My goal is to take this knowledge and translate it into becoming the manager of my own hotel. I believe that becoming an effective manager will lead to countless career opportunities.

Extra curricular activities

I spend a lot of time at my church. I attend service at least twice a week and I am very close to mostly all of the church's members. Many of us volunteer our services with the congregation to provide food for the hungry, clothes for the needy, shelter for the homeless, services for the community, and so on. We take great pride in our church and the community and it is our goal to lend a helping hand whenever and wherever possible. Often times I am placed in charge of program planning for any activities the church takes up.

Go Get em' Coach

In affiliation with the church I was introduced to a girls softball team looking for a coach. I played softball all through high school and this was the perfect opportunity for me to get reacquainted with the sport. I was asked to be the coach by a few people and after some consideration I decided it was something that I really wanted to do. I have been heading the team ever since. Coaching girls softball is great. I have learned a great deal about sports management while coaching this team. I am responsible for all personnel and organization decisions for the team. This includes finances, travel, scouting, rosters, and so much more. The growth that I witness is truly inspirational.

Putting it all together

What I have presented to you is a veritable snapshot of who I am and what I do. I strongly believe that who I am as a person fits perfectly with the sports, recreation, travel, and hospitality industry. It is no coincidence that my occupation and how I choose to spend almost all of my free time are directly related to the industry. My education epitomizes each of these subject areas. Still, the reason I am meant to do this is because of my passion. I am driven to succeed in the hospitality industry through my career. I am compelled to be involved with sports and recreation. I am emphatic about furthering my education in the field. My passion is at the center of everything I do and is what sets me apart. When you combine my individual characteristics, my experience in the industry, and my passion for the field, I believe that you will find there is no doubt that I will succeed in this industry; This is where I belong.
