During my 22 years of life, I believe I've discovered a lot about me and life in general. I attended Garnet Valley High School. My mom had attended the same high school, so my family is deeply rooted in this part of Pennsylvania.

While in high school, I was involved in many activities, but the things I was most dedicated to were my family, my academics, cheerleading, and the drumline.

Activities like this forced me out of my shell and allowed me to delve more into things I cared about. This transitioned me into college.. It had always been a dream of mine to go away for school and experience something outside of my comfort zone. I chose the University of South Carolina for many reasons, but that is where I learned some of my most profound lessons. It was at the University of South Carolina that I realized I had a love for sports and the community, and knew that's where I wanted to work. My family had gone through some trials, and being so far away as a student, I was not able to help them, so I started to look for schools near my hometown that had a major geared for my new career choice. During my search I found the best university in the country that was fit for my career goals, and it just so happened to be close to home.

Experience in the Industry

Nothing has given me quite a first-hand experience as my internship with the Wilmington Blue Rocks has. The Wilmington Blue Rocks are the single-A affiliate of the Kansas City Royals. For my internship, I was classified as a marketing intern, however I seemed to split my time in between the marketing and community relations department. My job often consisted of signing people up for games, coordinating with other employees the in-between inning activities and who participated in them. I was also one of four female interns, all the rest being male. I feel my internship was a good introduction into the industry and I am eager to learn and experience more.
