

Mike Courtright

STRENGTHS OF AN ASPIRING PROFESSIONAL

Volume 1, Issue 1

1/29/2010

My Internship Experience

Wilkes-Barre/Scranton pioneers, where I completed my industry related hours

In the summer of 2009, I completed my junior internship at Temple University Campus Recreation in the Aquatics Department.

While I was there, I learned many important values and skills that I can apply to the Recreation industry. I learned the procedure that goes into forming a program/special event from the ground up, such as proposals, approvals, and the running the actual event.

I also learned how to put together a budget plan, having helped the aquatics coordinator put it together for the department. Other tools that I crafted during this experience included creating an assessment survey, facility management, employee management and an overall greater knowledge in the field of Recreation.

I also gained a great wealth of knowledge completing most of my industry-related hours with the Wilkes-Barre/Scranton Pioneers football team.

I worked the first half of my internship in the front office selling tickets to local business around the area, as well as season ticket renewal.

I accomplished my greatest fear of communicating with professionals on the phone. Now I feel like I can talk to anyone in any particular setting.

I also helped put together promotional nights, such as merchants night, fan appreciation night, and armed forces night.

The last half of my internship was spent shadowing Coach Rich Ingold, while trying to learn what makes a coach successful. I helped the coaching staff with whatever they needed during practices. I feel as if I would make a great coach at any level.

What I bring to the table

"If you put your mind to it, you can accomplish anything." - Michael J. Fox

That is a quote from my favorite movie of all time, Back to the Future.

And although it might seem very simple, I believe that is extremely critical for an individual to understand that. And when faced with adversity some people forget this notion.

Anyway, that is what I believe.

I can go on all day about how I am hard-working, adaptable to any situation, driven, personable, experienced, but who isn't going to tell you that. All of this is true about me, but it doesn't separate me from everyone else.

The truth is that I am unique and innovative in the way I view situations and I believe this adds value to companies.

Top 7 Reasons I STANDOUT

- VERSATILITY
- SWAGGER
- INTELLIGENCE
- PASSION
- BLUE-COLLAR MENTALITY
- TEAM DRIVEN
- DETERMINION

