TEMPLE UNIVERSITY

February 9, 2010

Rebecca Sokol first attended Indiana University of Pennsylvania upon high school graduation. She majored in Fashion Merchandising, but after one semester, she needed a new environment. Rebecca transferred to Bucks County Community College where she attended for a year and a half. She knew that Indiana University of Pennsylvania was not the right school for her, so eventually she transferred to Temple University. In August of 2007, she became a part of The School of Tourism and Hospitality Management. Her involvement in extracurricular activities were crucial to her, so she joined The School of Tourism and Hospitality Management Association, played intramural basketball, and was also her team captain for intramural soccer. As her career at Temple University is about to end, Rebecca became certified in First Aid and CPR, and joined the Athletic Equipment Managers Association. Rebecca chose to major in Sport and Recreation Management because she has always enjoyed playing sports and thinks it is very important to enjoy and be passionate about her career. Getting an education and working throughout college has helped her develop skills that are necessary for her success. Rebecca is hard working, responsible, dedicated, and is willing to do whatever it takes to become a successful equipment manager.

Work History

Rebecca first started her career at Modell's Sporting Goods where she worked for three years. While there, she found her passion for sports and apparel. Rebecca was responsible for redesigning the layout of the apparel department to strategically replace high margin items in high traffic areas. After working at Modell's for so many years, Rebecca interned with the Philadelphia Eagles as a Training Camp Merchandise Intern. At training camp, Rebecca marketed and sold Eagles merchandise as fans entered training camp, provided excellent customer service while interacting with fans, accounted for all money handles daily within her sales register, and interacted with fans and answered questions related to daily team activities. At the conclusion of training camp, Rebecca was offered a part-time job with the Philadelphia Eagles as a Game Day Staff Member. On game days, she assembled displays for her personal stand, interacted with fans to ensure a positive game day experience, and accounted for all money handled daily within her sales register. Rebecca currently works for the Philadelphia Eagles and hopes to continue being a staff member for years to come. Rebecca's hard work and dedication was able to allow her to obtain a junior internship with Villanova University. She worked in the athletic department equipment room. While there, she assisted in issuing proper equipment to coaches, trainers, and athletes, helped with the storage and reconditioning of equipment, and coordinated new inventory check-in. Rebecca hopes to continue her career in a university's athletic department.
